1	Name of Department/ Centre:	Bioinformatics Centre About the Centre: Bioinformatics is a multidisciplinary area that is growing very fast both at the level of industry as well as academics. University of Pune is a premier institute which state of art offers M.Sc. program in Bioinformatics to meet the manpower requirement of industry as well as research institutes. Bioinformaticians are in great demand worldwide. Students with physics, chemistry, mathematics and statistics background with sound knowledge of biology can help in developing new algorithms and tools of Bioinformatics. Those with background in biological, medical, agricultural and veterinary sciences can use Bioinformatics tools to extract useful knowledge in the areas of biodiversity, drug and vaccine development, agro-biotechnology, environmental biotechnology etc. Bioinformatics Centre of the University of Pune is one of the leading centers of Bioinformatics research and education in the world with highly competent faculty, state-of-the-art computing facilities and user-friendly library. Fellowships are awarded to about 40-50% students for proven academic performance on a semester-to-semester basis. For additional information please visit http://bioinfo.net.in Background: Bioinformatics Centre at the Savitribai Phule Pune University (Formerly University of Pune) was established in 1987 to carry out research activities in various areas of Bioinformatics. The Centre had developed the web-based Animal Virus Information System (AVIS) database and necessary software tools very early to extract knowledge from these and other similar databases and continues to develop newer resources in the term of databases and servers. Research in the areas of immunoinformatics development of phylogeny-based methods, prepare vaccine against JE, viral comparative genomics, protein structural bioinformatics, and metabolic pathways engineering, chemo informatics, BIG data analysis, therapeutics and drug design etc. are currently being carried out. In 1997 the Centre launched a one-year Advanced Diploma training program in Bioinformatics (ADB) for postgraduate students from diverse disciplines. Five years later, the Centre launched the first-ever four-semester M.Sc. course in Bioinformatics in the country. The Centre has conducted several national and international workshops and training programmes since its inception.
